to capture some forts in the interior of Kentucky. They succeeded in capturing Ruddles and Martins and made a hasty retreat to their boats.

A legend is handed down by those more than four score years old that Col. Byrd was pursued, and fearing they would be attacked, sunk their arms and ammunition in South Licking, near Body, and this point is to-day called Byrd crossing.

Some twenty years or more ago the late Louis Fryer found near the mouth of South Licking River a copper cannon ball which is supposed to have belonged to Col. Byrd, as the United States did not manufacture cannon balls of the size and material. This unique relic is in the possession of Squire J. L. Fryer, and he prizes it very highly.

SOME HEROIC WOMEN, AND OTHERS.

(New York Herald.)

"My husband's enlistment expires next November, but he will re-enlist." That is the patriotic statement made by the wife of William J. Clark, Chief Turret Captain of the battleship Arkansas, who, temporarily assigned to the steamship Silver Shell, risked his life in a long running fight with a German submarine. So long as there grow brave men to go to sea to fight, as long will there be brave women to remain at home and, by their encouragement and unselfishness, to urge them to deeds of daring that lead to personal glory and to the honor of the nation.

"My husband's enlistment expires next November, but he will re-enlist." What a difference between that feminine expression of pride and those masculine whimpers that come from the cowards who try to evade enlistment! What a difference between this humble wife of a $66 a month sailor and some women of wealth who recently have been advertising their un-Americanism by inciting resistance to the draft and by otherwise giving aid and comfort to the national enemy!

In the trying days to come, when Americans by the thousands will be on the front, it will be found that among the women left behind there will be a thousand Mrs. Clarks for every whimpering coward, whether male or female.

GERMAN SUBSTITUTES FOR RUBBER TIRES.

Rubber being scarce in Germany nowadays, a number of bicycle tires made of substitutes for rubber are reported to have appeared on the German market, says the Popular Magazine. First came a tire made of steel wire about 3-16 inch thick, closely coiled, with ends welded together. This was high-priced, damaged pavements and rattled in use. Then came three different types of wooden tires, the cheapest being made of a single piece of wood, while others are made of wooden sections. Another type of wood tire has the outer surface covered with leather strip. Steel springs are used with all the wooden tires, either in forks or between tire and rim, which adds considerably to their cost. Tires covered with leather or with canvas, instead of rubber, are also on the market. But the best substitute for the rubber tire has a cloth-bound inner tube filled with a solid preparation resembling rubber, that is said to be quite elastic.

THE PRESS AND THE GOVERNMENT.

(Louisville Evening Post.)

In common with other newspapers throughout the country, the Evening Post desires to acknowledge the receipt of the following communication from the Treasury Department:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

The Bureau of Publicity of the Liberty Loan of 1917 notes with pleasure and appreciation the excellent assistance you have rendered and are rendering in patriotically promoting the sale of the

LIBERTY LOAN BONDS.

Please accept sincere thanks for your co-operation.

R. W. WOOLEY.

Director of Publicity.

Liberty Loan, 1917.

Washington, June 22, 1917.

The labors of the press in promoting the registration preparatory to the draft have not been acknowledged by the War Department.

The efforts of the press consistently enlisted for and constantly applied to, the development of profitable business for the Postoffice Department, have never been acknowledged; the overworked staff of that department seems determined to punish the press for its work in this direction. It remains to be seen whether the public is more appreciative than the Postoffice officials.

Heretofore the representatives of the people in Congress have rejected the proposition of the Postoffice Department to make it unprofitable for the newspaper to use the Postoffice Department at all. If they succeed in this, there will be less business imposed on the men now prostrated under the burden of an eight-hour day, one month holiday, numerous sick leaves with substitutes, and a life tenure of office.

The press is entitled to the thanks of the Navy Department and the War Department in connection with the recruiting of the army and navy during the past sixty days. The press has received no thanks of any kind from these two departments; but it will continue the work of expounding the principles upon which these two arms of the service are organized; of explaining the honor that comes to men who enlist voluntarily in these branches of the public service; of protecting these recruits from imposition from any quarter, and of honoring them at all times for their achievements.

These are but a few of the many services rendered by the press as a direct representative of the people to the government created by the people, paid by the people, directed by the people and existing only by the consent of the people.

It was Jefferson who said: "Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter." Today it is the press that expounds to the taxpayers the new tax laws and the principles which the framers of the laws have ignored or violated. It is the press that reconciles the taxpayers to the burdens that war makes necessary; reconciles them to the taxes essential to the conduct of government. It is the press that without compensation, informs the taxpayer when his taxes are due, when his returns are due, how he can make his returns with the least annoyance to himself or the agents of the government. It is the press that is to be especially burdened with taxation, punished for these services. It is not to be subject, we suppose, to retroactive taxation, but it is to be subjected to triple taxation where other branches of business are subjected only to one form of tax.
